PG&E Commercial Highlights District Students, Programs – Marcus Walton

PG&E has chosen to feature the District's energy conservation efforts, which includes students from Richmond High School, in two commercials that will air more than 1,600 times in the San Francisco Bay Area and more than 700 times in the Central Valley and Central Coast. One commercial features the work of three Richmond High School students, the school's "energy patrol," who saved $50,000 by reminding teachers to cut off lights when classrooms were not in use. The other spot features Energy Conservation Manager Julio Arroyo discussing lighting upgrades that have taken place at several schools.

The 30-second commercials are scheduled to be aired on local broadcast and cable channels. In addition, the Communications Office has developed a robust strategy to promote the spots, which includes email blasts, social media, and website postings.
